

$5000 MISSING GIRL IS FOUND

ADELE BOAS.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Adele Boas, the missing daughter of Arthur E. Boas, a millionaire thread manufacturer, was found today on a train bound from Boston to New York.

The fact that the girl was on the train was first made known to the family by the BOSTON AMERICAN.

She denied her identity until the train reached the Grand Central station, where she was identified by her uncle, who took her home.

The identification of the girl was first made in Boston by Joseph Danahy at the main news stand in the South Station from whom the girl bought several New York papers before taking the train. The BOSTON AMERICAN at once confirmed this identification and communicated with the girl's relatives in New York.

Four persons were certain that they saw Adele Boas take the 8 o'clock train, and their descriptions of her all tallied. The girl had been missing from her home since last Friday, and the reward of $5000 offered by her father secured the police in their search for her.

At 6:15 o'clock today Henry M. Carey, who is an assistant to Joseph Danahy at the main news stand in the South Station, saw a young, neatly dressed girl enter the station at the New York street entrance, she walked straight up to the stand and then she said to him: "Have your New York papers arrived yet?"

He told her they had not, and she was much disappointed.

Asked for "Best News," the appearance of an young girl, and one of each of the good and bad stories, in such a place alone at so early an hour caused Carey to observe her closely. She took the paper and went to the large waiting room, where she sat it through in about twenty minutes. She returned.

"Have the New York papers come yet?" she asked.

"Yes, they have," he said, "but they're not here yet."

"Oh, please," she said almost childishly. "I'll have to read another Boston paper." He told her to wait and he returned again to the waiting room.

At 6:30 a. m. she asked a third time if the New York papers had arrived. Eugene McCarthy, whose attention had been called to the young stranger by Carey, observed her coming walking companion with the picture in the New York American and her papers. Finally she was given one and she said: "Thank you, please, I'm waiting here."

A short time later she spoke to Carey again, asking about the first train for New York.

She took this train, arriving in New York at 2 o'clock.

JORDAN'S DEFENCE IS BEGUN

Mrs. Livermore Places New Mortgage to Save Jordan

The big fight for the freedom of Chester S. Jordan, on trial for the alleged murder of his wife, Honora, began this afternoon, when the medical experts of the State were put upon the rack of cross-examination.

When the State rested at noon the defence had not yet availed itself of the privilege of cross-examining Medical Examiner Magrath. Dr. Swan and Dr. Merrill and Professor Whitney, the noted Harvard blood and poison expert.

Counsel for the defense have indicated that they will try to break down the testimony of those medical witnesses in the effect that Mrs. Jordan was choked and that her throat was cut before she was found. They will also fight the contention of Professor Whitney that the brown hair found on the pillow is Mrs. Jordan's, or if it is, that it shows Jordan hit his wife with the cushion.

Cross-Examines Magrath.
When court opened at 2 o'clock Judge Stevens asked the defense if they were ready to go ahead with the cross-examination.

"Well," said General Bartlett with a drawl, "we will go ahead as best we can."

Medical Examiner Magrath was called to the stand and General Bartlett questioned him.

General Whitney began by asking a great many questions as to Medical Examiner Magrath's knowledge of strangulation, indicating that the force of the legal intricacies of the defense is to be used to bring down, if possible, the claim of the State.

Professor William F. Whitney, the noted Harvard expert, called as a witness today, declared that a hair found on the pillow of the State was not the hair of Mrs. Jordan.

General Whitney began by asking a great many questions as to Medical Examiner Magrath's knowledge of strangulation, indicating that the force of the legal intricacies of the defense is to be used to bring down, if possible, the claim of the State.
